A HUDSON VALLEY WINE AND SPIRITS GUIDE

Hudson, NY is a well known hub for antiques surrounded by farmlands, apple orchards and beautiful hiking trails. But there's been a slow transformation that's attracting global attention. Hudson now boasts of gourmet restaurants, the best nightlife north of New York City, a progressive cultural scene and artists community that's giving the city its own unique feel.

Renovations across the city have revamped colonial and early industrial age buildings into top recording studios, galleries, and spas. While the city itself is racing through a renaissance, the surrounding hills have also been feeling what's happening in Hudson. Beautiful country roads are now also home to vineyards and artisan distilleries.

While the Napa Valley has been the long standing American Viticultural area, there is now a complex web of stellar grape growing regions across the country.

Local flavors and artisan specialties are giving rise to a new type of wine culture. In Columbia County, passionate vineyard owners are producing their wines using techniques and philosophies deeply rooted in the history of the Valley and the idiosyncrasies of the land. The widespread use of older, more focused techniques for making wine have contributed to the region's reputation as a producer of exquisite single batch flavors that are on par with the best the world has to offer.

Regulatory measures that kept New York distilleries in check since prohibition have recently been softening to attract more business to the state. The Hudson Valley has benefited from this new deal for distilleries because it's the best region in the state for excellent locally sourced crops. Craft distilleries in Columbia County are now creating some of the best whiskeys available in the world, using tried and tested techniques that use local fruits and grains. Below is a selection of some of the region's best known and delicious wineries and distilleries.

Hudson-Chatham Winery, Ghent, NY

Perhaps the winery that exemplifies the Hudson Valley style the most. This Winery is truly a labor of love that utilizes vintage techniques and grapes perfectly paired to the land. In a beautiful pastoral setting between Hudson and Chatham, this winery is a must-see. It's the highest ranked winery in the Capital Region.
